Tells Hamptons Magazine
That Hampton Coffee Is Part Of Her Perfect Day In The Hamptons !

MODEL Behavior

Hamptons chats up Beth Ostrosky, the lucky lady who sees the softer side of Howard Stern, lives the high life in Amagansett, and knows how to stuff a wild bikini.

H: Can you describe a perfect day in the Hamptons?

BO: A perfect day in the Hamptons—wake up, take the dog down to the beach for her morning walk. Come back, get in the car, go to the Hamptons Coffee Company to have a soy chai latte, walk around East Hampton, go back to the house and spend the day by the pool and on the beach. Then we would go out to a wonderful dinner at Della Femina.

Beth

Ostrosky's "boyfriend," as she subtly calls the outrageous shock jock and self-proclaimed King of All Media without actually naming him, might be the one basking in the attention of legions of fans, but talk to the animated, thoughtful, and joyous Ostrosky for just five minutes and it becomes obvious that she is quite the catch. While Ostrosky happens to be the dynamite blonde-haired model with a bod to envy in a skimpy red bikini gracing the cover of August's sultry FHM, she lacks the conceited attitude one would expect from a woman with her good looks; instead a cheerful laugh takes its place. Her personality reflects that of the amiable neighbor, always seen walking her dog around town at the same hour, and stopping to chat with the other dog owners.

As Ostrosky discusses life's sweetest pleasures with Hamptons this week, it's obvious that this characterization isn't far off. She's a regular person without pretension, but happily fills that void with equally passionate feelings for her "boyfriend," aka Howard Stern, her bulldog, Bianca Romijn-Stamos, and the Hamptons. "We go out the first two weeks in July for our big vacation. And then every single weekend all summer and a couple of times in the fall and winter," Ostrosky says of her home in "the beautiful town of Amagansett."

The Pittsburgh native, who used to vacation with her family at their cottage on Lake Eerie, admits that the resort spot she now travels to from her beloved adopted home of New York is "very, very different," yet she is enamored all the same. With upcoming projects that include her 2005 swimsuit calendar, a spot on a lifestyle program, and talks with networks about hosting a show of her own, that outrageous boyfriend just might have some friendly competition, but surely he would agree that the attention is well deserved.

HAMPTONS: What are your favorite things about the Hamptons?

BETH OSTROSKY: Oh my gosh. The beach, the dunes, the water. I love the town of East Hampton, just shopping there or getting coffee; sitting, talking to all the other people walking their dogs. We love doing that. We do that pretty much every single day.
